OPTIONAL BASE COACHING

1. Before each roll of the dice, with a runner or runners on base, the offense team manager may elect to “play it safe” with respect to the advancement of base runners following a single or a double or both. The specific runner or runners must be named (never the batter) and said runners will then advance just one base on a single (if stated) and two bases on a double (if stated) regardless of what the board indicates, WHICH MAY ALSO NULLIFY A SPECIFIED ADVANCEMENT OF THE BATTER OR PRECEDING BASERUNNER. Such runners thus avoid those putouts that would have resulted from trying for the extra base, but also, by “playing it safe”, may not advance any extra bases which the board states they otherwise would have reached safely.

2. The manager may elect to “play it safe” with respect to base advancement following a caught fly ball. The runner or runners must be named and said runners will then hold their bases on any caught fly, thus nullifying either a double play or a safe advancement as may be indicated on the playing board.

3. With a runner on third and NO OUTS ONLY (and if the bases are not full) the offensive manager may choose to “play it safe” on a ground ball WITH THE INFIELD PLAYING IN (C) ONLY. The runner on third then holds except on a hit or an error. Any throws by infielders that normally would have gone home then go to first base, PO-1B. This, of course, nullifies any catcher’s errors on throws home or any other play at the plate following a batted ball.

4. The manager may “play it safe” with respect to base stealing with runners on any of the three bases, not the batter. This nullifies both the successful steals as well as the throw outs.

In all above coaching, the runners “play it safe” must be names with respect to the above named situation, or situations (1, 2, 3, 4) intended before the dice roll, or coaching option on that play is lost. BASE COACHING DOES NOT APPLY TO SACRIFICE AND HIT & RUN BOOKLET.
